

Q24 - How frequently do course instructors use students' data to predict whether they will be successful in their major?

Never

Rarely

Sometimes

Always

Most instructors answered "rarely", or "never" when asked if they track student data. However, there were a few that said that this is a regular practice for them, so at the very least, student data tracking happens on a small scale.